

SHERWOOD SQUARE • 5830 S. SHERWOOD FOREST BLVD •
BATON ROUGE, LOUISIANA

The right
tenant can already see themselves
here.

*Before the site visit. Before the lease.
Before the first customer walks in.*

HELPING COMMERCIAL SPACES COMMUNICATE THEIR FUTURE BEFORE IT EXISTS.

THE LEASING CHALLENGE

A space can be available. A tenant still has to believe.

Square footage. Lease rates. Floor plans. Demographics. Traffic counts.
All of it matters. None of it answers the only question that decides everything from outside the market:

Can I picture my business succeeding here?

A storefront creates a question.

Sherwood Forest Blvd already answers half of it.

A compelling vision creates an opportunity.

THE OPPORTUNITY

Sherwood Square already has what new developments spend years trying to build. *A place inside an existing routine.

People already move through this stretch of Sherwood Forest Blvd for work, for healthcare, for shopping, for dinner, for errands that never make the calendar. The opportunity isn't filling space. It's joining a routine that already exists.

The traffic was never the problem.

School of Rock. Pinspiration. Heavenly Donut. Royal Hookah. The address is already known.

Momentum doesn't need to be built here. It needs a reason to stop.

THE CUSTOMER JOURNEY

A tenant doesn't lease walls. They lease access to people.

MORNING

Employees. Residents.
Commuters. The start of someone's day.

MIDDAY

Lunch. Errands.
Appointments. Convenience
becomes connection.

EVENING

Wellness. Dinner. Company.
Retail becomes an experience.

Morning. Midday.
Evening. The
same address,
three different reasons to stop.

A tenant mix isn't planned. It's proven, one storefront at a time.

THE FUTURE TENANT VISION

What could this space become?

A modern neighborhood lifestyle destination. Wellness. Community.
Convenience. The kind of place people return to without thinking about it.
Boutique fitness. Specialty retail. A café built for staying a while.

This is not a proposed tenant. It is a visualization of the type of experience the space can support.

The building doesn't change. What people
see in it does.

The future rarely arrives. It reveals itself.

FROM SPACE TO EXPERIENCE

The difference between a listing and a leasing opportunity.

Empty walls. Square footage. Unknown potential.

AFTER

Customers arriving. A working storefront. A place a brand can belong to.

The physical space does not change. The perception of the opportunity does.

TODAY

TOMORROW

Nothing here was invented.

It was only allowed to arrive early.

WHY THIS MATTERS

The leasing decision often begins before the site visit.

Retail brands evaluate markets remotely. They compare locations, consumer patterns, growth corridors, expansion targets. The broker's challenge is turning local knowledge into something a decision-maker two states away can understand.

Luminary helps close that distance.

possibility looks like this.

A space people stay in, not just pass through.

Someone is already pulling in.

Retail success begins before anyone opens the door.

A modern retail store interior with large windows, wooden floors, and various merchandise. The store features a mix of wooden shelving, armchairs, and tables displaying products. Large windows provide a view of the outside world. The text "Can I already see myself here?" is overlaid in the center.

Can I already see myself here?

Extraordinary places succeed
when they become ordinary parts of people's lives.
